Summer

Languor of men and beasts under a hot sun. The cuckoo is heard, then turtle dove and the goldfinch make themselves heard.

A calm breeze blows but soon the rude North Wind takes up a quarrel with it.

The little shepherd cries, he is afraid of the cruel and gusty wind and all that it brings with it. The fear of lightning and hail stops him from sleeping.

The fear is justified as the North Wind returns, the sky is filled with thunder and the lightning cuts through the higher blades of corn.
