Parliamentary Intelligence.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, April 17.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Colonel DAVIES wished to know when a report from the Finance Committee might be expected.

Sir H. PARNELL replied, that previously to the Recess, the Committee had gone through the Navy, the Army, and the Ordnance; and that he, as Chairman, was directed to draw up the Report on the results come to by the Committee, on those branches of the public services. That report would be, perhaps, ready next week. The Committee were now engaged on the Miscellaneous Estimates. He begged to be allowed this opportunity to rebut the charge, that much unnecessary trouble had been given to the public offices in calling for accounts; it was groundless—there had been about 200 accounts ordered, but they were mostly drawn up by himself and with the greatest care, and chiefly under the guidance of a gentleman attached to the Treasury. Wishing to stand well with the House and the Country, he desired to make this explanation.

The other orders of the day being then disposed of, the House adjourned.

APRIL 21.

COMMERCE WITH THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Mr. S. WORTLEY put some questions to Mr. Huskisson, for the purpose of learning whether any, and what, proceedings had taken place since January last, with reference to the negotiation between the United States and this country, on the subject of the commercial intercourse between the United States and the British West India islands.

Mr. HUSKISSON, in a low tone, said, that he had no difficulty in stating, that subsequent to the correspondence laid upon the table of the House, there had been further communications on the subject between Great Britain and the United States of America. He assured the Hon. Gentleman, that there could not be the least objection on the part of the British Government to lay all the documents before the public; they had already been published in America. The Hon. Gentleman might also feel satisfied that the friendly sentiments by which he professed himself actuated towards the United States of America, were such as the Government of this country would always be disposed and ready to promote in every possible manner. He could further state, that in a few days there would be laid on the table of the House, by command of his Majesty, certain credentials which had been passed between this country and the United States; and the ratifications recently received from America, relative to regulating the question of the north-west boundary, and other points of moment.

WAYS AND MEANS.

On the motion of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, four millions were voted out of the consolidated fund already granted, to be appropriated to making good certain supplies, already agreed upon by the House.

CANADA.

Mr. Secretary HUSKISSON, on being called upon by the Speaker to move, pursuant to notice, the appointment of a select committee to inquire into the present state of civil government in the Canadas, stated that as the subject was one of the utmost importance, and as many gentlemen who wished to be present at the discussion were then absent, he would not now bring forward the motion which stood for that evening. The Right Hon. Gentleman concluded by postponing the motion until Friday next.

The house then adjourned at five minutes after 10 o'clock.

APRIL 22.—CATHOLIC QUESTION.

Sir F. BURDETT stated, that for the convenience of the House he wished to make it known, that he had no intention of putting off the Catholic Question, and that it would therefore certainly be brought forward on the 29th, according to motion.

LONDON, April 23.

We understand that there is not the least foundation for the report circulated yesterday, that the Emperor of Russia had sent orders to suspend the crossing of the Pruth, on account of menacing remonstrances from the Courts of London and Paris. No such menaces have been sent, nor have they ever been contemplated by either Court.—Their sincere wish and sole object are to follow the course which is best calculated to preserve the Peace of Europe. We are quite sure that menaces would not be productive of that effect. We have no doubt that the Russian army will cross the Pruth; but we still hope that the Sultan, seeing the danger of his situation—convinced that he will have to fight single-handed—and aware of the mighty and overwhelming force that can be brought against him—will listen to more moderate counsels, and avert by negotiations the imminent perils to which he is most otherwise exposed.

The whole tenor of the Emperor of Russia's language and conduct affords a sufficient pledge that he will not refuse an offer of negotiation on the part of Turkey, if made with the sincere desire to adjust all the differences between the two countries, and re-establish friendly relations, nor do we believe that he would exact harsh or severe conditions, if satisfied that they would be entered into with good faith by the Sultan.

The substance of the Treaty of Peace between Russia and Persia is already known—but the motives that could induce Persia to commence hostilities against such a Power as Russia, remain unknown, nor is it easy to guess them. However, Russia has derived immense advantages from this short conflict—a valuable increase of territory, important privileges, and large pecuniary indemnity.—Courier.

Should the French Expedition be intended against Algiers, its success could be by no means certain. The Europeans have been very unsuccessful in their attacks upon Algiers. Charles V. totally failed in his great expedition against the Algerines, and lost almost all his army and fleet. The Spaniards attacked them in 1601, and were defeated; and in the following year our expedition met with no better success. In 1632 and 1633, the city was bombarded by the French, but with no ultimate result. In 1775, the Spaniards fitted out a large expedition against Algiers, and were obliged to retreat with very heavy loss. In 1783 and 1784, Spain fitted out two expeditions against Algiers, but although aided by the Portuguese and Neapolitans, they were, in both instances, defeated. Lord Exmouth's victory, in 1816, does not appear to have humbled these barbarians.

It is very confidently reported in the higher and political circles in Paris, that the principal Allied Powers have transmitted express instructions to their respective Ambassadors in Lisbon, to take down their national coats of arms from the fronts of their houses, and consider their functions at an end, in case the Infant Don Miguel, Regent of Portugal, should declare himself Sovereign, in conformity to the views of his mother.

It is stated in a letter from Lisbon, that Sir F. Lamb took some obnoxious decrees to the Infant, and having obtained an audience, inquired if they had received the Prince's sanction. Don Miguel hesitated; and the old Queen, who was listening, entered and said, that it was not to be expected the Infant should be responsible for all that was published in Lisbon. The Ambassador replied that he had no business to transact with her Majesty, but with the Infant Regent in the name of the King. Settled at the reply, the old lady, with the rapidity of a woman's decision, caught Don Miguel by the coat, exclaiming, "Vem commigo dextra o fallar."—"Come with me; let him talk on."—Observer.

The approaching election of President in the United States occasions much speculation in that country. The candidates are Mr. J. Q. Adams, the present President, and General Jackson—the latter being by far the most popular.

His Majesty is not only in the enjoyment of good health but has recovered his strength sufficient to enable him to go through the fatigues of a Drawing Room, which, by Tuesday's Gazette, is announced for the 23d April, the day on which the King's State Birth-day is now kept. His Majesty takes daily rides through the beautiful plantations in the Park, and has a distinguished party of the Nobility on a visit at the Lodge.

A Vienna letter mentions, that it is by no means certain at which of the Courts of Europe a Princess will be selected as the consort of his Imperial Majesty of Brazil. The first negotiations on the subject, it appears, were addressed to the Court of Bavaria, and it is now confidently stated that they are suspended, if not broken off. Not wishing to treat the chance of so important a choice to the exchange of a portrait, or mere diplomatic negotiation, it was a considerable time ago current at the Brazilian Court, that an accomplished Nobleman, deeply in the Emperor's confidence, had been sent over to Europe to conclude this delicate affair. To him a portrait of the Emperor had been confided, which, it will be remembered, our public prints announced, had been magnificently set in diamonds by an eminent jeweller in London. What tends to confirm the opinion prevalent on the continent, of the choice not yet being determined, is the return of the Special Agent and Commissioner to Rio de Janeiro, and the portrait being still in London, in charge of the jeweller who set it.

The story of the Marquess and Marchioness de Loule being about to reside at Caen, in Normandy, from motives of economy, their fortune being unequal to the expenditure consistent with their rank, is, we find, entirely unfounded. Previous to the Princess leaving Portugal, she received her portion of the family diamonds left by the late King for division amongst the children. It will be recollected that John the Sixth was, at the time of his death, the richest Monarch in the world in diamonds and gold, both in bullion and coin. The Crown diamonds went to the Emperor Don Pedro; thus reverting back to the country from which they originally came, and the arrangement made by the executors was for the money to be distributed among the children on the arrival of Don Miguel at Lisbon. The Marquess and Marchioness de Loule have selected Paris as their future residence, for which place they intend to leave London in the course of a few days. As part of her travelling preparations, the Marchioness has, we understand, lodged her diamonds at the house of Ruddle and Bridge, for security. The residence of the Noble Pair, during their stay in London, has been at Thomas's Hotel, in Berkeley square.

It is said that Miss Hart, the daughter of the Irish Chancellor will be shortly led to the hymeneal altar by Lord Forbes, Comptroller of the Household to his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, and eldest son of the Earl of Granard.

LONDON UNIVERSITY.—Great preparations are making in this patriotic Institution for the most splendid course of Lectures ever delivered in London. The apparatus of the Professor of Natural Philosophy, which we have seen, is of the most magnificent description. The models of pulleys, levers, and other mechanical powers, are constructed on the largest scale ever seen in an University, and are made of the best materials, beautifully polished. The drawings of the various subjects in Botany, Natural History, and Anatomy, are on a similar scale of magnificence and beauty.—Verulam.

THAMES TUNNEL.—Yesterday the Tunnel was examined by Mr. Gravatt, when it was ascertained that the slightest derangement of the brick work has not taken place; and every thing appears to be in the same state as when left by the workmen. Mr. Brunell, junior, is in a fair way of recovery.

HALIFAX, May 7.

We were this morning favoured with Boston papers to the 22d ult. received by the Western Mail.—The Private Secretary of Mr. President Adams, it will be seen by the following extract, has been assaulted while in the act of discharging official duty:

Extract of a letter from Washington, to the Editor of the New York Commercial Advertiser.

Some excitement was produced to-day by an assault made by Russel Jarvis, one of the Editors of the Telegraph, on John Adams, Jun., Son and Private Secretary of the President.—Mr. Adams had delivered a message to the House of Representatives, and was passing through the Rotunda, to the Senate Chamber, for the purpose of delivering it there. In his passage, Mr. Jarvis rushed upon him, and attempted to pull his nose. Mr. A. though taken by surprise, eluded the attempt, and with a small walking cane, belaboured the head and shoulders of his adversary with activity and effect. At this point of time, two gentlemen, one of them Mr. Dorsey, of the House, interfered, and separated the combatants. Mr. Adams went on, immediately, to the Senate Chamber with his message, and the other retired—neither was hurt. Mr. Jarvis was provoked to the assault by an insult which he received from Mr. A. at the levee on Wednesday night last, and which insult, it is contended by Mr. A's friends, Mr. Jarvis well merited by his deportment there. Mr. Jarvis, it is further said, had written a note to Mr. A. demanding an apology; to which Mr. A. verbally replied, that he had no apology to offer, and what he said, he would repeat.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States.

Washington, 17th April, 1828.

In conformity with the practice of all my Predecessors, I have, during my service in the office of President, transmitted to the two Houses of Congress, from time to time, by the same private Secretary, such messages as a proper discharge of my constitutional duty appeared to me to require. On Saturday last he was charged with the delivery of a message to each House.—Having presented that which was intended for the House of Representatives, whilst he was passing within the Capitol, from their Hall to the Chamber of the Senate, for the purpose of delivering the other message, he was waylaid and assaulted in the Rotunda, by a person, in the presence of a member of the House, who interposed and separated the parties. I have thought it my duty to communicate this occurrence to Congress, to whose wisdom it belongs, to consider whether it is of a nature requiring from them any animadversion; and also, whether any further laws or regulations are necessary to ensure security in the official intercourse between the President and Congress, and to prevent disorders within the Capitol. In the deliberations of Congress upon this subject, it is neither expected or desired by me, that any consequence should be attached to the private relation in which my secretary stands to me.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

The Newfoundland.

ST. JOHN'S, (THURSDAY) May 20, 1828.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—"Ciris" was received at too late an hour for this day's publication, but shall appear in our next.

We should be glad to see "A youthful Newfoundland."

ARRIVALS.—In the Kate, from Barbados, Mrs. Hunt and children.—In the Little Ann, from Waterford, Mr. N. H. Wilking.

DEPARTURES.—In the Fame Packet, for Halifax, Rev. Mr. Crosecomb and family.

BANK FISHERY.—One of the Schooners fitted out in England, for this almost forgotten fishery, arrived last week from the Banks, with about 300 qtls. prime fish, to Messrs. W. & N. H. Wilking.

The Schooner Betsy & Nancy, M'CARTHY, master, from Halifax, bound to Burin, fell in, on the 1st instant, with a large Ship, about 100 miles from the land, abandoned by the crew, her larboard bow stove by the ice, cut-water carried away, and four feet water in the hold. Captain M'CARTHY boarded her with part of his crew, and having partially secured the leak, cleared the vessel of water in a few hours, and eventually, being favoured by the wind, succeeded in bringing her in safety to Burin, where she now lays, very little injured. She proved to be the Superb—a beautiful ship, about 450 tons, apparently not more than a year old, from Bristol for Quebec, laden with a valuable assorted cargo of salt, iron, chain cables, porter, cheese, &c. The fate of the crew is not known; but it would appear, from the remarks on the log slate, which were dated 27th April, that they could not have left her more than three days.

The Barque Trial, from London, bound to Quebec, put into Trepassay on Friday the 16th May, with the body of her late Master, JOHN YOUNG, he having died at sea.—The Mate, Mr. NICHOLSON, proceeded with the vessel on the 20th.

Orphan Asylum School Room,
May 25, 1828.

AT A Special Meeting of the BENEVOLENT IRISH SOCIETY, held this day, for the purpose of electing a Treasurer, in the room of their late worthy Treasurer, Mr. JOHN BURKE—

In the absence of the Vice President, STEPHEN LAWLER, Esq., First Assistant, took the Chair.

The Chairman briefly stated the object of the Meeting, and requested the Members present to proceed to ballot for a Gentleman to fill the important office of Treasurer to the BENEVOLENT IRISH SOCIETY. He had no doubt their choice would be such as to reflect credit and respectability upon the situation.—After which the ballot took place, when, in a few minutes, Mr. TIMOTHY HOGAN was declared to be unanimously elected.

The following Resolutions were then unanimously passed:—

Resolved, 1st.—That the Society avail themselves of the present occasion to express their united regret for the loss of their highly-esteemed brother, Mr. JOHN BURKE; and that a last sad tribute to his memory be immediately adopted.

2d.—That the sympathy and condolence of this Society be offered to Mr. BURKE's afflicted widow and children, for the severe bereavement of so affectionate a husband and tender parent; and that these Resolutions be published in the public papers of this town, and entered upon the records of the Society.

By order,
JOHN SHEA,
Secretary.

I WILL NOT be accountable for any Debts contracted by the Crew of the Brig Transit, under my command.

Notices.

TAKE NOTICE!

THE Subscriber hereby cautions the Public against many Persons who have set themselves up under the assumed title of BONE SETTERS, and who have ruined several poor persons that unguardedly applied to them for assistance. He also begs further to state, that he will not for the future receive under his care such persons with fractured or dislocated limbs who are generally made, by these imposters, in a worse state than when they first received the injury;—but he will be, at all times, most happy to render all the assistance in his power to such as unfortunately receive broken Limbs, or Sprains—no matter of what Country, Creed, or Colour; and he earnestly requests that poverty may not prevent any one from applying to him for aid, for, if the patient is in indigent circumstances, and unable to afford him any remuneration, then he will most willingly give his time and skill, without fee or reward.

P. B. has been constantly applied to, during a residence of nine years in this country, by men, women, and children, of all classes, with fractures, dislocations, &c., and he has the gratification of reflecting, that, through his humble exertions, many of his fellow-creatures have been materially benefited.—During this period of time he has cured 758 persons, of which he has kept a particular account, many of whom had been given up by the Medical Gentlemen, and he would be sorry to come before the Public in this manner, confident that his character in St. John's rests upon too firm a basis to be shaken by the evil designs of those upstart practitioners in the bone-setting art, to whom he has alluded, did he not feel it a duty incumbent upon him to warn every one against them, and, at the same time, cast off the blame of lately having destroyed the limbs of one or two individuals, who were, wilfully or erroneously, asserted to have been under his care.

PETER BRENNAN.

THE SAILOR'S FATE.

BY T. T. CARRINGTON.—Author of 'Dartmoor.'

[A peasant, in pursuing some sheep which had wandered from their accustomed pasturage, discovered, in the middle of the naked solitude (Dartmoor) that stretches from Lydford nearly twenty miles in a south-eastern direction, the body of a sailor, much emaciated, and in such a state as gave reason to think he had been lying on the spot five or six weeks. His countenance, however, was serene, and his posture composed: a small bundle of linen supported his head, and the remains of a faithful dog lay at his feet.]
—Warner's swalk through the Western Counties.

He perished on the moor? The pitying swain
Found him outstretch'd upon the wide, wild plain;
There lay the wanderer by the quivering bog,
And, at his feet, his patient, faithful dog.
Thrice gallant brute! that through the weary day
Shared all the perils of the lonely way—
Faced the fierce storm, and, by his master's side,
In the cold midnight, laid him down and died!
Thrice gallant brute! to then the local bard
Shall sweep his lyre, fidelity's reward;
Thy fate shall wake the frequent sigh, and fame,
At least in moorland annals, grave thy name!

Was it for this (so fancy sings) the Tar
Consumed his rigorous youth in climes afar,
And nobly dared, in danger's every form,
The ocean battle and the ocean storm;
Undaunted stood where on the blood-red wave
The death shot peal'd among the English brave;
Or scaled the slippery yard, where, poised on high,
As the dread lightning burst'd along the sky,
He fearless hung, though, yielding to the blast,
Beneath him groan'd the rent and trembling mast?
Ah! haply fired by home's enchanting name,
From tropic shores the enthusiast sailor came;
To the fleet gales his bounding vessel gave,
And reach'd, at last, the fresh, wild, western wave;
Larg, soon descried, upon the eager view
Large, and more large, the black Boletium grew;
Then, as he heard the shoreward surges roll,
High glow'd the local fire within his soul;
And now he raptur'd cried, "All dangers o'er,
My native land! we meet to part no more."
While England, England on the foam swept lee
Uprise, proud peering o'er the subject sea,
Disclosed at once to him her matchless charms,
And woo'd the wearied exile to her arms.

Where the swift Torridge, Tamar's sister, flows
Through northern fields, perhaps his cot arose;
And stout of heart, and strong of foot, he pass'd
With rapid course along the leeseuing waste.
'Twas a wild path, by e'en the peasant shunn'd;
But then his beckoning Canaan lay beyond;
Already, fancy fired, he saw each scene
Well known and loved—the church, the village green—
Saw the hills sweetly rise, his native dells
Soft sink, and heard the music of the bells—
Delightful melodies, that still enrage
The love of youth, and joy the heart of age.
Illusions all! down rush'd the moorland night;
He met the mountain tempest in his sight.
No guide to point the way, no friend to cheer;
Gloom on his path, the fearful snow storm near!
Alone!—ah when the ocean conflict grew
More loud, more fierce, and swift the death shot flew,
Or round his bark the infuriate billows raged,
'Twas sympathy that all his toils assuaged;
With dauntless hearts, with friends and comrades dear
He shared the danger, and he smiled at fear.
But now—man for away—an exile poor,
He wander'd cheerless on the untrodden moor!
Swift from the cloud the arrowy lightning flash'd,
Fierce o'er the waste the impetuous waters gush'd,
Deep was the howl of torrents; and when broke,
Drowning the torrent's voice, the thunder stroke;
Wide horror reign'd—again the deathful flash
Him'd on his track—again the mighty crash
Startled, but conquer'd not, the brave! He stood
Amid the storm, in that great solitude,
With all a seaman's high, enduring soul,
Eyed the keen fires, and heard the fate peal roll,
And though the warring element had power
To crush him in that dark and trying hour,
They shook not that true spirit, firm and fast,
Which sways a British seaman to the last!

He perished on the moor! No sheltering grave
Oped for the hapless hero of the wave;
Till, rescued from the winter gale's dread wing,
Waked the lone desert at the touch of spring.
Then feet came o'er the wild,—by hill and rock
Sought the rude swain the victims of his flock.
There on the silent waste the wanderer lay,
The sport of winds through many a brumal day!
And, rough though highland swain, a generous sigh
Burst at the lot of poor mortality;
So cold, so pale, so shrunk that manly brow,
That lip so mute, that eye so rayless now;
That livid form which seem'd so rudely cast
From man, and whitening in the boreal blast!
He saw and felt, and mourning at the doom
Of the poor stranger, bore him to his tomb
In the lone moorland church yard;—yet no stone
Records his name—his home, his race, unknown;
And aught remains of him in village lore
But this sad truth—He perished on the moor!

THE KING'S LEVEE.—On Thursday his Majesty held the first Levee for the season, which was very numerous attended; many of the Nobility and Gentry having come great distances to be present. About 1 o'clock the King's Guard, with their state colours and band in full uniform, marched into the Palace Court-yard, and a Captain's guard of the Life Guards, with their magnificent band, took up their station in front of the Palace, and the two bands performed alternately during the afternoon. The gates were thrown open at 1 o'clock, and the company immediately began setting down, and continued till past three, without intermission. A party of the Yeoman Guard were stationed in the guard-room, and a party of the Honourable Corps of Gentlemen at Arms lined the Presence Chamber. Soon after two o'clock his Majesty entered the Royal Closet, and gave audience to the Duke of Gloucester, the Duke of Wellington, and the Earl of Warwick, who kissed hands on being appointed a Lord of the Bedchamber. His Majesty then received all the Foreign Ambassadors and Ministers, after which he gave audience to the Cabinet Ministers, the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, the Master of the Rolls, the Commander of the Forces, the Earl Marshal of England, &c. His Majesty then proceeded to the chair of state in the Throne Room, surrounded by all his great officers of state. His Majesty was dressed in blue regimentals, and wore the insignia of several English and Foreign Orders. The Marquess of Winchester, Groom of the Stole, and Earl Mount-Charles, were the Lords in Waiting, and introduced the numerous presentations, and announced the visitors to his Majesty. The Duke of Wellington was dressed in the uniform of Colonel of the Life Guards, and wore Russia duck trousers. His Grace wore a small black patch on his nose, in consequence of an accident he met with the other evening, in stepping out of his carriage at Apsley House, when his foot slipped and he was thrown with considerable violence against the curbstone; he looked, however, in good spirits. The Marquess Wellesley also appeared much improved in his looks since his marriage and residence in Ireland. His Lordship and Prince Esterhazy appeared much amused by chatting with Townsend, the police officer. The Prince wore a Hussar uniform, and his equipage and attendants attracted much notice. Prince Polignac is a handsome man. Prince Lieven appeared grave and thoughtful. The Earl of Eldon looked uncommonly cheerful, far more than while presiding in the Court of Chancery; he was dressed in black. The Marquess of Hertford was the first Nobleman that left the Court; and his frame, once so athletic, seemed to have lost much of its vigour; he was also lame. In fact, more instances of lameness were observable amongst the courtiers than we ever remember on any former occasion. Mr. Secretary Huskisson seemed improved in health and spirits; and Lord Goderich's cheerful countenance indicated any thing rather than regret for the loss of the Premiership. The Marquess of Lansdown looked resigned. The Duke of Montrose, who appeared to feel the hand of time, and the Marquesses of Winchester and Camden, and Lord Melville, were accompanied by their sons. The Duke of St. Alban's, dressed in the splendid costume of Grand Falconer of England, wearing his gold chain and medal, accompanied by his uncle, Lord Frederick Beauclerk, availed himself of the privilege of his hereditary office, and drove through the Park in a most splendid equipage. St. James's-street and Pall Mall were crowded all day with carriages and company, and the windows, particularly of the Club-houses, were fully occupied. The greatest order was preserved by the police, and the day passed off without any accident. The presentations amounted to upwards of three hundred. Amongst them were the Duke of Wellington on being appointed First Lord of the Treasury; and Mr. Goulburn, on being appointed Chancellor of the Exchequer. The Duke of St. Alban's on his marriage. Mr. W. J. Peel, and Mr. Lawrence Peel, on being appointed Commissioners of the Board of Control. The Peers lately created, on their advancement to the Peerage and several Bishops and Dignitaries of the Church, on their appointment, translation, and preferment. There were also a large number of Military and Naval Officers on their promotion. The Levee concluded about 5 o'clock, when his Majesty left the State Rooms.—Observer, March 30.

BALL TO THE MARQUIS OF ANGLESEA.—Last night the Members of the Kildare-street Club gave a Ball and Supper at the Rotunda, in honour of his Excellency the Marquis of Anglesea. The decorations of the principal apartment, executed under the immediate directions of Mr. Verelli, of Suffolk-street, were in a style, at once the most superb and appropriate, and deserving of general admiration. The correctness of design and brilliancy of execution by which they were distinguished, reflect the highest credit on the artist.

The refreshments, however, provided, we happen to be enabled to say, were most abundant and recherche—the London markets were ransacked, and the talents of those renowned artists, Messrs. Bilton and Hayes, were exerted to the utmost—some idea may be formed of the scale of refreshment provided, when it is known that there were no less than sixty soups at supper. The confectionary was provided by Messrs. Mitchell and Beaty.

The supper was laid out in the Rotunda Room, (one of the largest in Europe unsupported by pillars) and the coup d'œil was strikingly superb. His Excellency sat on the right of the Marquis of Downshire, at a table raised upon a platform. The Noble Chairman in proposing the health of the Gallant Marquis, said, "that he felt it quite unnecessary to do more than refer to the splendid array of beauty, rank, and fashion that surrounded and joined him, in wishing health to His Excellency the Marquis of Anglesea."

The Noble and Gallant Marquis rose and said—I sincerely regret that I am prevented by indisposition from giving expression to the feelings which actuate me. I owe deep acknowledgments, not only for the splendid fete with which I have been this night complimented, but for the kind feeling which has been evinced towards me, by all classes, since my arrival in this country. I trust that no act of mine shall ever deprive me of the good opinion of the people of Ireland, which I so highly appreciate. One word more, I really must be excused for passing over the gentlemen who have honoured me with this, perhaps, the most brilliant fete I have ever witnessed, and conclude by proposing

"The Women of Ireland."—(Drank with great cheering.)

The Marquis again resumed—If I know my daughters, I can guess what is passing in their minds, however they may be prevented from giving utterance to it—I, therefore, in their names, and for them, will now propose, and I call upon the Ladies to give the toast with the same enthusiasm which has been just exhibited in their regard—

"The Men of Ireland."

Received with immense laughter and applause, during which the "horizon of the board" assumed a new and beautiful tint from blushes, "becks, and wreathed smiles." The windows of the Rotunda Room were each decorated with a Star of the Order of the Bath, Garter, Cross of St. Patrick, Hanoverian, &c., in brilliant variegated lamps. Directly opposite his Excellency's seat was placed a Crown, G. R., and Waterloo, which had a most imposing effect. After supper dancing was resumed, and the company did not depart till four or five in the morning.

THE LORD HIGH ADMIRAL'S VISIT TO IRELAND.—We can state upon unquestionable authority, that it is the intention of his Royal Highness the Lord High Admiral to visit this country in the latter part of July next. Arrangements of the most splendid description for his reception are in progress at Rostellan, the seat of the Marquis of Thomond. His Royal Highness also intends to honor Michels-town, the residence of Earl Kingston, by a visit; and after sojourning there for a few days, the Royal Duke means to proceed to Carton, on a visit to the Duke of Leinster.—Evening Paper.

There is every probability, that henceforth the clothing of the army on the Irish Establishment will be made up in Ireland. The manufacturers will owe this important concession to the Lord Lieutenant.

SEVENTH HUSSARS.—The remainder of this fine regiment (of which his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant is the Colonel) arrived on Sunday, by the Steamers, from Liverpool, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Frazer, and proceeded about one o'clock to Portobello Barracks, where they are to be stationed.

Colonel Cotter, superintendent of the Irish Emigrant force to Brazil, arrived at Rio Janeiro the 18th December. Wintrop Maunsell, Esq., of Limerick, has been gazetted to a Commission in the 3d Irish Battalion. The Irish Brigade, shortly after landing, it need not far what was termed "their rights," and refused to obey the Emperor's orders. The Portuguese soldiery were sent against them, but forced to fly in confusion before the Irish Shillelagh. Since the arrival of Colonel Cotter, every thing has gone on well. The jealousy of the natives was excited against this foreign invasion, and it became unsafe to walk the streets at night. Colonel Baldwin and Lieut. Lecky narrowly escaped assassination from the blacks. Mr. Cox and another officer had been sent to a condemned island for insubordination.

MAGISTRACY.—We are informed, on the authority of The Evening Mail, that Sir Anthony Hart has issued upwards of seventy Commissions of the Peace, and that the Roll contains a long list of Patriots, Papists, and Radicals. It likewise boasts that it will shame the rogues, and print the list, which it threatens to take from the Hanaper Office at its own proper charges. From the tone of the paragraph, we perceive that the Lord Chancellor has fallen under the ban of the faction, because his Lordship is resolved to do equal and impartial justice. We congratulate Sir Anthony Hart, and indeed the country, on this manifestation of ill-will from such a quarter. It redounds to the honour of the Lord Chancellor, and it furnishes another demonstration, that the old system under which the patrons of the Mail have flourished so long, is incurring a silent, but a radical change.—Dublin Evening Post.

IRISH COURT.—The private Ball at the Castle last evening, was brilliant and fashionable. At half-past ten the rooms were crowded, and about that hour dancing commenced. The company retired to partake of a splendid supper at twelve; dancing recommenced at one, and was kept up with great spirit until two o'clock, when the company separated.

It is curious that Mr. Spring Rice, who has just received an Indian appointment, is an Irishman, and that the Indian term for rice is Paddy.

The Marquis Wellesley conversing the other day with Lord Maryborough, on the subject of the letter lately published, addressed by Mr. Wellesley Pole to the Ex-Chancellor (Lord Eldon) relative to the decision of his Lordship in the Court of Chancery, respecting the guardianship of Mr. Pole's children, the Noble Marquis on his opinion being asked of the publication in question, replied, "Why, as far as Lord Eldon is concerned, it is what might be vulgarly called, stirring him up with a long pole!"

PORTSMOUTH, April 5.—There are at present at this port three vessels of war which have been fitted out for scientific purposes. The Hecla, which arrived yesterday from the river, under the command of

Mr. Thomas Boteler, who is to proceed to survey the west coast of Africa, to the northward of the Equator. The Kangaroo, commanded by Anthony De Magne, Esq. returning to the West Indies to resume his survey of the Florida Keys, &c.; and the Chanticleer, Captain Henry Foster. This latter vessel is, we understand, to make a circuit of the globe, for the purpose of ascertaining at certain places where she is to touch, a number of scientific objects, and of making various experiments with the pendulum. The Chanticleer is expected to sail in about ten or twelve days. The Kangaroo will sail to-day, and the Hecla in the course of next week.

ROYAL SINCERITY.—The Constitutionnel contains a letter from King Ferdinand to General Apodaca, Viceroy of Mexico, in 1820, requesting him to declare that colony independent of Spain, in order that it may afford an asylum to him, when released from his constitutional gaolers. His Catholic Majesty assures his Viceroy that he intends to make his escape incognito to his American subjects, and that he will enjoy ineffable pleasure in exercising his Royal prerogatives on the other side of the Atlantic!

EXTRAORDINARY HUMAN ACT.

A letter appears in the Waterford Mirror, addressed by Mr. Joseph Williams, of Liss, (who fortunately was saved in the Venus) to a friend in Waterford.—The following forms the transcript of his letter. The subject is above all eulogy—it will be read with admiration by every individual who can set a due value on such an act—may the warm-hearted sailor never feel this chill of adversity!—

"Henry Snow, Esq., of Larkfield, county Kilkenny, near Waterford. The saving of this gentleman reflects singular credit upon one of the crew, whose name we much regret that we have not learned. After being some hours upon the top of one of the masts, Mr. Snow, exhausted and benumbed, was bidding farewell to this world, and preparing for the fate that seemed inevitable, when the sailor cried out from the top of the other mast—"A vast, not so fast, my beauty—I'll be with you presently." Scarcely sooner said than done, Jack swam over to him, Jack's heart, he said, was quite warm, and Jack spoke truth. "Hold on," said he, "with one hand, and thrust the other into my bosom; I'll warrant you it will soon warm." And so it did. He then made Mr. Snow shift hands, and kept him alternately holding on with one hand, and warming the other, until the arrival of the long-delayed relief.—With the ancients so warm a heart, such heroic humanity might be rewarded with a statue; with the moderns such conduct should not go unrequited.

PARIS, February 25,

(From the Gazette de France, Feb. 25.)

We have a letter from Vienna, dated February 17, which says—

"The last letters from Constantinople, relative to the Catholics, and the Christians in general, are of so alarming a nature, that it is feared the Russians will immediately pass the Pruth. The accounts from Odessa, dated the 7th of this month, leave no hope whatever."

We have this instant received fresh letters from Constantinople, dated the 26th January. They are extremely interesting:—

"Circumstances appear at length to indicate the approach of a crisis which has been long feared. The last Hatti Scherif, which destroys all hopes of reconciliation with Russia, as well with respect to its internal affairs and the Treaty of Ackerman, as with regard to the proposals of pacification, has been read in all the Mosques; and the immediate closing of the Bosphorus against the ships of all Christian nations, affords a proof that the late negotiations have so incensed the Porte that it no longer cares for the maintenance of the existing treaties with the other States. The rigorous measures, of which I have already spoken to you, still continue, and appear to be enforced in consequence of the certainty that Austria has not accepted the mediation:—

"In the midst of all these alarms the military preparations and measures of precaution are prosecuted with great diligence. A Palace for the Sultan is building on the Asiatic coast, with ditches and fortifications, to which he may retreat in case Constantinople may be besieged.

"The march of troops to Adrianople continues, as well as the sending of the Sultan's equipages, who, according to a report which is generally believed, will very shortly go to that city.

"The persecution of the Greeks and Armenians is not relaxed. M. D'Ottonfels has interfered without success. All the Catholic Armenian churches in Pera and Galata have been closed.

"The state of the capital in general affords a melancholy appearance, and all hope of any arrangement has vanished. The exiles on the coast of Asia are brooding over projects of vengeance, and the rage of the Mussulmans against the Christians, inflamed by the Firmans and the Hatti Scherif, increases every moment; so that every thing is to be feared. In addition to this, 200,000 Asiatics are expected. Their arrival will be the signal for the most complete anarchy."

We learn from Angora, that of 11,000 Armenian families exiled to that place, only 4,000 have arrived in the most lamentable condition.
