MR. DANIEL GALLAGHAN.—It is stated, that should this gentleman be successful in the present contest for Cork, still, that upon petition, his election must be declared void, not as a partner with his brother the ex-member in the firm, and, therefore, as a person included in the contract, upon which the late return became void, but as a surety for the said brother in the victualling office. This liability, as surety, it is asserted on good authority, brings him within the provisions of the act of parliament.—Dublin paper.

Exports of Corn and Flour from Ireland.—An account has been presented to the House of Commons, of the quantity of corn, meal and flour, exported from Ireland to Great Britain, from the 5th Jan. 1828, to 5th January 1829. According to which, we find, that the total quantity of grain imported in 1828, amounted to 2,379,106 quarters, and in 1829 1,872,509 quarters. The total quantity of meal and flour exported in 1828, was 1,046,478 cwts., and in 1829, 1,030,050 cwts.

COBBETT AT ELY.—Mr. Cobbett arrived at Ely last Thursday morning, and soon after accosted a man whom he met with "Pray, my friend, are you a native of this place?" "I am," replied the man;—"And can you show me the place where, 20 years ago, the poor local litigians were flogged?" "Yes, Sir, I can;" and he took him to the place, and pointed out the identical spot. Mr. C. looked about him, and exclaimed with energy—"The grass grows all around it; but the spot where Englishmen's blood flowed is withered and barren! The blood of the children of the soil was shed, and they were hemmed round by armed foreign harpies to witness the disgraceful scene. I have cause to remember it; for, writing my thoughts too warmly upon the subject, I suffered incarceration in Newgate for two years, and a fine of 1000l." Mr. C. then retired from the ground, and presenting the poor fellow with some silver, asked him whether any of the sufferers were living; and upon being told there was one of the men residing in Ely, he requested his guide to send him to the Lamb Inn, where, some hours after, the man arrived, and received a present and a hearty shake of the hand from Mr. C. Mr. Cobbett, in the course of the day, went to the White Hart Inn, and joined the farmers at the market-table, where from 100 to 150 persons were present, most of whom were highly gratified with the manner in which he handled the several subjects on which his opinion was asked.—Cambridge Independent Press.

WAVERLY NOVELS.—A friend who visited Edinburgh lately, gives a most flattering account of the splendid success of the Waverly Novels.—In the literary market it rarely happens that demand equals, far less exceeds, supply; but, in the case before us, Messrs. Cadell & Co., great as their publishing facilities are, actually find it difficult to keep pace with the wants of the public. Ten thousand copies, the new addition of Waverly, was out of print in a few days; and though a second was supplied as quickly as possible, excess of appetite seemed to grow so fast by what it fed on, that not only Mr. Baillan's, but other men's presses were put to the utmost speed, even though aided by the power of steam. Altogether 32,000 copies of the new edition have been sold—a fact which we hold to be unparalleled in the history of literature. Sir Walter Scott, in fact, is the only individual we ever heard of that could give permanent employment to a paper mill, and a large establishment of printers to boot. Supposing the new edition of the works in question should extend to forty volumes, at least 30,000 reams of paper will be required, the value of which, at 30s. per ream, will amount to the sum of 1,450,000 sterling. Forty volumes, at 5s., will cost exactly 10l., and supposing that the whole should prove as successful as Waverly, the money put in circulation altogether will amount to the enormous sum of 320,000l. And all this is effected by one teeming and inexhaustible mind—one restless and indefatigable pen! In the wide circle of modern writers, it is impossible to point to a single individual that has diffused the same degree of entertainment, or realized by his writings any thing approaching to the same sum of money.—Dumfries Courier.

A second canal, to connect the two seas between Bayonne and Toulon, is in contemplation. The probable cost is estimated at thirty-eight millions of francs. It is to be navigable for vessels of 120 tons burthen.

The Newfoundland.

ST. JOHN'S, (THURSDAY) May 27, 1830.

The latest intelligence respecting the health of his Majesty is rather of a cheering nature—it is copied from the Sun of the 24th April:—

The following Bulletin was issued this morning:—

“ Windsor Castle, April 24.

“The King has passed two good nights, and continues better.”

(Signed) “HENRY HALFORD.”

The half yearly meeting of the Association of Newfoundland Fishermen and Shoremen was held on Thursday last, at the Globe Tavern, WILLIAM THOMAS, Esq., Vice President, in the Chair. There was an unusually full attendance of Members, and before the meeting separated 26 new Members were admitted. The collection of the day amounted to upwards of 45s.

The Chairman offered his hearty congratulations on the prosperous condition of the Institution, both as regarded their funds and numbers, and said he felt great pleasure in remarking, that as yet only two applications had been made for relief. The orderly and respectable appearance of the members, called forth the warmest approbation of the Directors, most of whom were present on the occasion.

We have seen, within a day or two, a splendid gold Medal, transmitted by His Majesty's Government, for GEORGE HARVEY, of Dead Island, near Cape Ray, to mark their sense of his highly meritorious conduct in rescuing, under Providence, from a watery grave 152 of the passengers and crew of the brig Despatch, wrecked near that place in July 1828. It will, perhaps, be in the recollection of our readers, that upon the representation of Captain SIR RICHARD GRANT, of H. M. S. Tyne, who happened to be at the time cruising near the scene of calamity, and rendered the most prompt and efficient aid in conveying the survivors to Halifax—the Committee at Lloyd's, in October of the same year, unanimously voted Harvey the sum of 100l., for his exertions and humanity on the above melancholy occasion; and, at the express request of His Excellency the Governor, the Secretary of State for the Colonies directed a medal to be struck off, and presented, on the part of Government, to the same fortunate individual.

The medal cast, we believe, about twenty guineas, is very beautifully wrought, and about six inches in circumference, with a device on one side, in bas-relief emblematic of a ship on the rocks—the lightning flashing round, and the sea breaking over her—while a boat and crew are seen proceeding to her assistance. On the reverse is the following inscription:—

“ Presented to GEORGE HARVEY, in testimony of the high sense entertained by His Majesty's Government of his humane exertions in preserving the lives of the passengers and crew of the brig Despatch, wrecked near Dead Island, on the coast of Newfoundland, in July 1828, with the name ‘SIR THOMAS JOHN COCHRANE, Knight, Governor and Commander-in-Chief,’ encircling the medal.

It must be doubly gratifying to Harvey—independent of the heartfelt plea arising from the consciousness of having saved so many fellow-creatures from destruction—to find his conduct so highly appreciated, both in this and the mother country; and we feel confident, that such manifest acts of generosity as we have had much pleasure in recording, by being made known as generally as possible, will be the strongest inducement to others, when occasion requires, to emulate his example—and by such means entitle themselves to similar rewards.

ARRIVALS.—In the Mars, from London, Major Sall, Royal Veteran Companies.—Landed from on board the Elizabeth, bound to Harbour Grace, Mr. Duncomb, Mr. T. Bennett, Mr. Munier Hutchings. From Poole, via Carboneir, (on their way to the Brazils,) Captain George Broom, of the Imperial Brazilian Naval Service, and Lady.—In the Victoria, from Greenock, Mr. Kydd, Mr. M. Callum. In the Abion, from Teignmouth, Mr. and Mrs. John Eales, Mr. and Mrs. Wright (of Brigus), Miss E. Hemley, Mr. Knowles, and Mr. Rowell.—In the James Hunter, from Demerara, Mr. Fitzly. In the Abiona, from Teignmouth, Mr. John Rendell, and Mr. Boden.—In the Lark, from Poole, Mr. Ayles, of Carboneir.—In the Betsy, from Liverpool, Mr. Thomas Mara and Mr. John Harding. Last evening, from Teignmouth (per Kingwood), viz. Port de Grave, Mr. N. H. Wilking.

The Brig George, of and from Peterhead, bound to Quebec, put in here yesterday, disabled. While King to on the 12th May, shipped a tremendous sea which carried away her masts, boats, bulwarks, stanchions, &c.

The Brig Lark, Capt. Pynn, at this port from Poole, on the 20th instant, in lat. 47. 15, N. long. 45. 00, W. fell in with the Brig Dartlet, from Liverpool, bound to Harbour Grace, out 42 days, laden with flour, salt, &c. for Messrs. Thorne & Co. She was under very much, having been dismasted, and otherwise very much damaged in a heavy gale of wind, on the 12th May last. Captain Pynn, by her arrival, and next morning offered to supply them with spare spars, sails, or any thing else in his power—but the hull of the vessel being tight, and the wind fair for the land, they deemed accepting any assistance.

On the 19th M. v. Capt. Walters, of the Hebe, spoke to-day with the Kerr, master, in lat. 47. 0, N. long. 40. 20, W. out 25 days from Liverpool, bound to Harbour Grace, with loss of mizzenmast, mainmast, &c.—Deemed to be reported.

Arrived on Sunday last, brig James Hunter, Frazer, master, from Demerara. On the 16th inst. in lat. 37. 50 long. 57. 10, saw a brig to windward with loss of fore-topmast. Same day, spoke the brig Sophia, of and from Halifax, totally dismasted; required no assistance, but the crew to be reported. On the 22, in lat. 43. 30 long. 52, spoke the brig Lord St. H. lens, of and from Newcastle, bound to Miramichi, with loss of mizzenmast. At 2 p. m. saw a brig to leeward with her bowsprit gone; and at 4 p. m. a ship, with loss of main and mizzenmast, and fore-topmast—a brig lying by close to her.

Capt. Scott, of the brig Oberon, has communicated the following remarkable circumstance, which occurred on his passage from Hamburg to this port:—

On the 12th April, in lat. 51. 48, N. long. 29. 8, W. while making about 7 knots, with a fine breeze from S. W., several whales were observed playing round the vessel, and one of them, in crossing the bows, sud- denly rose and carried away the mizzenmast. The fish was then observed to dive, but came to the surface right ahead, and again made for the vessel, which it struck, on, with tremendous force, carrying away the stem, figure head, chain bobstay, &c., and nearly throwing the vessel to the stars; after which it disappeared, and was seen no more. The pumps were immediately manned, but the vessel being fortunately a new British-built one, withstood this extraordinary attack with- out sustaining material damage—the Capt. Scott is of opinion, that had the fish struck on either of the bows, she inevitably have gone down.

Died, at Dartmouth (England), on the 6th ult., aged 27 years, HANNAH, only sister of THOMAS H. BROOKING, Esq., merchant on this place.

FRANCE.

Grand Constitutional Banquet in Paris.

The dinner given under this high sounding title to the Deputies for the Department of the Seine, took place on Thursday, in the immense saloon belonging to Carlier, Restaurateur, in the Rue de Temple, Paris. Though nominally devoted to the honour of the members of that department, all the Deputies in town who voted for the address were invited. The rooms in which this great number, of 700 persons, was accommodated, consisted of a saloon, and a garden parallel to it, covered with an awning of canvas, the windows being removed. They were hung with chaplets of roses and festoons of flowers, forming arches of the most tasteful character. The President's chair was rich in a variety of ornaments, and crowned with the motto of "Honour to the 229;" and a profusion of chandeliers and lights gave brilliancy to the whole. Four tables, of immense extent, were covered with a dinner really containing every delicacy of the season; and from the excellent arrangements of the stewards every person was comfortably accommodated, and the strictest regularity preserved. The company was composed of the merchants and tradesmen of Paris attached to the liberal side. The President was a M. Rousseau, a fine old gentleman, with venerable white hair, selected as the most ancient Mayor of the department; and the Vice-President was Mr. O'Dillon Barron, an advocate of great talent. On the right of the chair was placed the Marquis de la Fayette, and near him were seen l'Abbe de Pompiere, M. Lafitte, the banker, and Benjamin Constant. The Marquis de la Fayette attracted the attention of all throughout the evening, and he seemed much gratified by the enthusiasm which he excited. He appeared to be no more than fifty, although he is upwards of sixty, fresh and unbroken, more resembling the late Lord Erskine in the face than any other person familiar to the English public. The Abbe de Pompiere was an old, infirm person, apparently ill calculated to take a part in active affairs. On each ticket was inscribed "Important notice—One toast only will be given, and that will be by the President of the banquet;" and the following was placed on every plate:—

Regulations of the Banquet.—In order that the tranquillity and decorum which should attend the patriotic banquet offered to the Deputies of Paris may not be for an instant interrupted, the stewards inform the subscribers that no toast can be given, nor speech made, except in the manner herein prescribed. One toast only shall be given by the President in these words—"To the union of three powers, the Constitutional King, the Chamber of Peers and the Chamber of Deputies;" and the Vice-President will express, in an address, the sentiments with which the firm and loyal conduct of their Deputies has inspired the citizens of Paris.

The company being arranged, and the business of eating and drinking began, and appetite being satisfied, a general demand of silence was made, and on the appearance of the President rising, the whole body gradually became tranquil, and those who had thronged to the principal table from the other rooms were remanded to their seats by exclamations of—"To your places, gentlemen!—gentlemen, to your places!" Order being restored, the President rose, and with a voice of emotion gave the toast above mentioned, with this exception, that he reversed the order, and named the Chamber of Deputies before the Chamber of Peers. M. O'Dillon Barron then rose, and addressed the meeting in an able speech, in which he took a review of the circumstances which had brought them together. The termination of this speech was marked by several rounds of applause, accompanied by the roll of the drum, and M. O'Dillon Barron sat down amid universal cheering. The cry of "Order" being again heard, General Damas next addressed the meeting.—The acclamations at the close of every patriotic sentence were enthusiastic. If the same sentiments are participated in by the same classes throughout France, and if they work with a little more reflection, and not condemn a minister before he has acted, as they have the Prince de Polignac, no government can resist them, or attempt to rule by any other than constitutional means. When the speeches were over, there was a kind of breaking up by common consent, and the electors flocked round the President and General La Fayette, overwhelming them with caresses.—He was saluted over and over again on each cheek, and there were as many struggles to impress their lips on his face, as if he were the loveliest and youngest of women. These demonstrations of joy were increased by cries of "Live La Fayette!"—"Honour to the conqueror!"—"Glory to the brave!"—and the enthusiasm mounting, groups struck their glasses together, and drank in that fashion to his and to each other's welfare. After a few rounds of Champagne had been served, the President, rising, commanded attention by ringing a small bell, which was placed near him on the table; and the Vice-President, elevating his voice, announced that the banquet had terminated. As soon as this declaration was made, the meeting prepared to separate, and the company got on the benches, in order to see the principal persons as they passed. The Marquis de la Fayette was conducted through his avenue by a number of friends, and was greeted on every side by applause, and cries of "Honour to the brave!"—"Honour to the conqueror!"—"Honour to La Fayette!"—and he was embraced and saluted on the cheeks at every step. General Damas, and M. Lafitte, the banker, the Vice-President, were also cheered; and each person of the least note had, in his exit, run the gauntlet of popularity. The meeting concluded with the same order and decorum with which it was commenced and conducted; and it left on the mind a strong impression in favour of the people who composed it.

DEATH OF TOM GALVIN.—Died, on Wednesday, at his residence in Kilmacshann, Thomas Galvin, who for sixty years performed with diligence, precision, and despatch, the important duties the law allotted to him to discharge. The office which Galvin filled, though not considered reputable in the eyes of a prejudiced world, was one in which he took a particular and most praiseworthy pride. The situation of hangman, Galvin regarded as one of the most effective in the administration of the law, and without which a salutary and beneficial example could not be afforded to those disposed to transgress the ordinances of society and morality. We believe it is a fact, which every day's experience will be found to justify, that no man is without a fault; and Thomas, commonly and affectionately designated To a Galvin, was no exception to this general rule. We regret to have to state, that, in addition to a man's best, but most sincere and unsophisticated attachment to the native, genuine, pure, and unadulterated distillation of Irish grain, he had a bold and forcible mode of giving expression to his feelings. Instead of indulging in a redundancy of phraseology, he deposed to every fact he had to state in such a manner as to give the ill-natured opportunity of saying he was cursing, but which the pious more charitably designated an expulsive proof of his sincerity.

The situation of hangman, which Tom filled so ably and so well, may be regarded as a gift of fortune, not only advantageous to himself but serviceable to the community. When he was a young man, a number of his fellow-citizens decided that he had taken too much care of his master's property, and a Judge had the cruelty to order him to leave this country for the period of his natural life. Tom was too decided in his attachment to Ireland to his fate long between the choice that was given him of quitting his shores for ever, or taking to himself the office of executioner, which was then unoccupied; and the hangman's cap being then vacant, fell upon the head of Galvin, who bore it as triumphantly as ever an old Roman did the cap of liberty. Tom had to tie the noose upon his own son-in-law, and to the last moment of his life it was to him a source of considerable consolation to reflect upon the tenderness with which he helped into "another and a better world" his dearly beloved relative. At four o'clock this amiable and accomplished man dropped from this life, amid the tears and lamentations of those who hoped he should have lived to help them, easily out of existence.—Peace to his manes! No wrestler knew better how to give a man a proper fall. When the trap of life was drawn from under him there was lost to society one on whom the state depended as a secure knot.

It is stated that a titled lady, who is a bonne vivante, and by no means infected with the Turkish antipathy to the juice of the grape, when flushed, a few nights ago, with her favourite beverage, visited one of the large theatres, where shortly after her arrival, she missed her reticule, and being "grievously oblivious," charged one of the box-keepers, an honest and respectable man, whose fortune has been as capricious as that of his accuser, (the jade, however, having taken a different turn) with having stolen it, although no opportunity had occurred for such a theft, and although, therefore, no excuse could be made for the accusation. After much foul language on one side, and many vain protestations on the other, the lady condescended to examine her own person, and found on the reticule which she had supposed stolen.—London paper.

PETTICOAT GOVERNMENT.—Here I heard the first singing of the birds this year; and here I observed an instance of that petticoat government which, apparently, pervades the whole of animated nature. A lark, very near me in a ploughed field, rose from the ground, and was saluting the sun with his delightful song. He was got about as high as the dome of St. Paul's, having me for a motionless and admiring auditor, when the hen started up from nearly the same spot whence the cock had risen, flew up and passed close by him. I could not hear what she said; but supposed that she must have given him a pretty smart reprimand; for down she came upon the ground, and he, ceasing to sing, took a twirl in the air, and came down after her. Others have, I dare say, seen this a thousand times over; but I never observed it before.—Cubbett's Register.

DODD, THE ACTOR.—There was a gossiping anecdote told of Dodd, while he was acting here, for the truth of which I will not be answerable. He sojourned, as the story goes, in lodgings, near the theatre, with a chere amie belonging to the company. This, perhaps, he might have found to be a snug arrangement in the summer months, if the tranquillity of the tete a tete had not been daily disturbed by discussing frivolous points, upon which the fond pair very furiously differed, inasmuch that the gentleman was wont to enforce his arguments more by missiles than by metaphors; in short, he threw chairs, tables, and chimney-pieces crockery all about the room. In the heat of one of these domestic fracas, which happened at an early dinner upon a shoulder of mutton, while Dodd clattered and the chere amie screamed, the landlord rushed upon the scene of action, in hopes, if he could not prevent a further breach of the peace, to hinder their breaking more of his property. "How dare you, Mister," ejaculated Dodd, who was brandishing the shoulder of mutton in his hand, "obtrude into our apartment while we are rehearsing?" "Rehearsing!" cried the amazed landlord, while the broken pieces of sham china were crashing under his feet.—"I could have sworn you were fighting!" "No, Sir," said Dodd, "we were rehearsing the supper scene in Catharine and Petruchio, or the Taming of the Shrew."—"Why, it does look," observed the landlord, giving a glance round the room, "as if you had been trying to tame a shrew, sure enough."—"Don't, you know, fellow," asked Dodd, "that we are advertised to act the parts this very night?"—"Not I, truly," returned the host.—"Then go down stairs, Sir," cried the comedian, sternly; "and read the bill of the play, and read it every morning, Sir, to prevent your repeating this impertinence."

History records not whether the landlord read the play-bill, but it sets forth that he did not forget his own; for, when he presented it, at the end of the week, it contained an appalling longitude of charges for old teapots, chopped Wedgewood vases, delf shepherdesses, and other articles of paltry earthenware,—headed with "Mr. Dodd, debtor to John Wilson, for choice articles of very rare and ornamental china, broken at the rehearsal of the Taming of the Shrew."—Random Records, by George Colman.

A Monkey Trick.—In 1818 a vessel that sailed between Whitehaven and Jamaica embarked on her homeward voyage, and, among other passengers, carried a female, who had at the breast a child only a few weeks old. One beautiful afternoon, the captain perceived a distant sail; and after he had gratified his curiosity, he politely offered his glass to his passenger, that she might obtain a clear view of the object. Mrs. B—— had the baby in her arms; she wrapt her shawl about the little innocent, and placed it on a sofa on which she had been sitting.—Scarcely had she applied her eye to the glass, when the husband exclaimed, "Good God! see what the mischievous monkey has done." The reader may judge of the female's feelings when, on turning round, she beheld the animal in the act of transporting her beloved child to the very top of the mast! The monkey was a very large one, and so strong and active, that while it grasped the infant firmly with the one arm, it climbed the shrouds nimbly by the other, totally unembarrassed by the weight of its burden. One look was sufficient for the terrified mother, and that look had well nigh been her last; and had it not been for the assistance of those around her, she would have fallen prostrate on the deck, where she was soon afterwards stretched, apparently a lifeless corpse. The sailors could climb as well as the monkey, but the latter watched their motions narrowly; and as it ascended higher up the mast the moment it attempted to put a foot on the shrouds, the Captain became afraid that it would drop the child, and endeavour to escape by leaping from one mast to another. In the meantime the little innocent was heard to cry; and though many thought it was suffering pain, their fears on this point were speedily dissipated when they observed the monkey imitating exactly the motions of a nurse, by dandling, soothing, and caressing its charge, and even endeavouring to hush it asleep. From the deck the lady was conveyed to the cabin, and gradually restored to her senses. In the mean time, the Captain ordered every man to conceal himself below, and quietly took his own station on the cabin stair, where he could see all that passed, without being seen. This plan happily succeeded; the monkey, on perceiving that the coast was clear, cautiously descended from the lofty perch, and replaced the infant on the sofa, cold, fretful, and perhaps frightened, but in every other respect as free from harm as when he took it up. The humane seaman had now a most grateful task to perform; the babe was restored to its mother's arms, amidst tears, and thanks, and blessings.—Macdiarmid's Sketches from Nature.

MUSIC IN GERMANY.—The cultivation of music is probably more general in Germany than in any other part of the world. Even in charity schools this art is taught, and we are told that no schoolmaster is allowed to exercise his profession unless he is able to teach the elements of this art and some instruments. Mr. Edward Taylor, in his "Airs of the Rhine," says, "it is rare in Germany to meet any assembly of instrumental performers to whom a cultivated ear may not listen with considerable satisfaction, and frequently with astonishment and delight, when the extremely humble character of the people, and their gains, are considered." Mr. Planche, in the "Descent of the Danube," also notices the skill with which the Bavarians sing in parts, apparently intuitively.—Constable's Miscellany.

"I'll lay a wager," said an Exquisite to his companion, "that I put yonder Irishman to the stammer." (The man was unloading potatoes from a barge.) "I say, Pat, what d'ye call those things in the boat?" said he, pointing to the potato.—"Faith," answered Pat, shouldering his basket, and turning upon his questioner a look of Irish contempt, "I don't call them at all—when I want 'em I fetch 'em."

A New Connection.—A widow, at Chelmsford, has lately advertised that she has entered into partnership with a gentleman who is now connected with her in her late husband's business.

A young man twenty-five years of age, who intends to emigrate to Swan River, advertises in the Morning Herald for a wife. We would recommend him a goose.

Kelly, who was afflicted with the gout, being told that the gout ensured its possessor a long lease of life, replied, "If it be so, I am sure the lease is held at a rack-rent."

THE SECRET.

Come to me, sweet, I've a secret to tell—
Come to me, sweet, in the bichen dell—
Come at the hour of the nightingale's song,
When the forest of odours are stealing along.
But, Lady, the secret I'd whisper to thee
Must cling to thy heart like the bud to the tree;
A beautiful flag shedding perfume around,
But voiceless and silent as dew on the ground.
Oh! breathe it to none;—let it sleep in its cell,
Like a glimpse of blue sky in a wood covered well;
Let it back in its nest, like a bird in its nest,
Till thy last chord of feeling be snapp'd and at rest.

TO CARA.

Sweet Cara, chase the tear away,
For nature ne'er intended
That grief should dim one smiling ray
In what she made so peaceful;
No, lovely girl, it is her boast,
Her never-ending lesson,
"That virtue always shines the most,
Which sorrows hardest press on."
Even while she plied her task divine,
And call'd her gems together,
To form that pearly soul of thine,
'Twas not in sunny weather;
And thus she thought perhaps a gloom,
Like that which o'er me lingers,
Would dare to hover round thy bloom,
The thought benumb'd her fingers.
"But oh!" she said, "no envious blight
Shall mar my last endeavour,"
And at the words a gleam of light
Dispersed the clouds for ever;
"For this, for this, the sun was made,
Great orb, I here renew it,
And thou, like him, when deep the shade,
Shall shine resplendent through it."

FASHIONS FOR APRIL.

(From the Lady's Magazine.)

Morning Dress.—Plain Batiste gown of a light tint of apple green, or primrose colour. A standing ruff of book-muslin very fully plaited, and bordered with Vandyked edging of Bedford lace. The gown raps on one side, the ruff gradually narrows to the folding, and the edging alone meets the belt. White book-muslin sleeves; they are full nearly to the wrist; the upper part is supported by a stiffening beneath. A fulling is put on the skirt of the dress, nearly as high as the knees; it is parted and headed by a rouleau of satin to match the dress. The cap is of fine Bedford lace, primrose-coloured gauze-ribbon; coloured velvet bands to the wrists.

Walking Dress.—Hat of bright peach-blossom satin; it is lined with white satin or plush; a pipe of peach satin passes just inside the white lining. A very beautiful feather, of various shades of lilac mixed with white, and made with mohair silk, in the shape of a bird of paradise plume. Ribbons inside and outside of the hat of peach-coloured gauze. The pelisse of peach-coloured satin or gros de Naples; the collar, shoulder-pieces, belt, cuffs, and trimmings, of velvet two shades deeper. The upper sleeve is cut in deep scrolls of the material of the pelisse, from beneath which falls a very broad chenille, or feather fringe, the colour of the velvet. The pelisse is closed with knots of cord, the same shade as the velvet. The chemisette is seen at the throat, the ruffles small and little seen. The dress is still more worn in the colour of Saxon green.

Ball Dress.—The dress of vapour crape. The short sleeves are parted into two divisions, the upper much fuller and larger than the under. Round the corsage is placed a double fall of Vandyked blonde, very deep on the back and shoulders, but narrowing to points in front, which are confined under a pearl or silver ornament. The skirt is trimmed with two scalloped falls of chenille fringe, the colour of the dress; each scallop is headed by a satin knot. The ornaments of the hair are blonde, being what the French call barbes; on one side is placed a bird of paradise plume or a silk feather; round the throat is a narrow velvet ribbon, clasped with pearl or silver band of white satin, edged with vapour-coloured satin.

Evening Dress.—Hat of blue satin, or gauze of the same colour as the dress, but some shades lighter; the feathers blue and white. The gown rich blue gros de Inde; Vandyked satin epaulettes fall low on the sleeves, and are brought round the back of the corsage, which is left quite plain in front, and made very tight to the shape. A deeper blonde than usual stands up round the neck. The sleeves are en beret—at top, and very tight to the lower part of the arm; at the knees the hem is headed with a narrow silk fringe, a braided rouleau, sometimes a very small pipe of satin. The place of the bos is supplied by a long transparent scarf of gauze, figured with coloured satin, or a blonde gauze rolled on the neck like the bos. Caps, dress hats, or the hair, very much covered by barbes of blonde, are universally worn on the Continent by ladies of all ages.
